LUNATIC LEGACY

By Different Folks

CHAPTER TWO

Jenny Priest looked almost as bewildered as Sam after reading the tiny jagged slip of paper. Laughing again she looked at Sam and said, "I am a shark when it comes to working out cross word puzzles but this makes me feel rather insignificant."

Sam dismissed the subject with a laugh too, not wishing to explain its source. They sat and chatted for sometime, discussing the recent ball games. At length Jenny excused herself and Sam was left to his own thoughts.

He took out the envelope which contained the slip of paper and read it again. Had his father intended to be so mystifying? What could he mean by such a jumble of words. Were the words to be taken literally or was he to interpret into them something not there. Surely no one this side of Morganton could expect the words to be taken literally. With a frown on his forehead, he seized his hat and without stopping to think where he was going he started down the hotel steps.

He walked hurriedly for sometime in the waning afternoon sunlight, and at length realized that it had been quiet a while since he had heard the street cars or much traffic. Looking up he found himself on the road that leads up behind Grove Park Inn. He continued up this road and finally found an inviting seat, overlooking a part of Asheville and giving a splendid side view of Grove Park Inn. A-

MISS LORENA CLARK

Take a good look at this picture. The article is a sort of three-pronged affair. We have been each month honoring some member of the staff for their fine work at Barium. Miss Clark comes in that category. Whenever some former student of Barium has done some outstanding thing, that deserves an article. Well Miss Clark comes in on that. And whenever there is a wedding in prospect, the persons involved are due a write-up. Miss Clark comes in that. So here goes. Way back yonder in 1924 a flock of four little boys and one little girl came to Barium. The boys all later distinguished themselves by holding down the same position on our foot ball team - right guard. It got so sports writers would just put down that name on our team without consulting anybody. The one girl, and this is the heroine of this article, distinguished herself in other ways. She was valedictorian of the class of 1931 and went to Flora Macdonald College where she made an enviable record. She made a record in more ways than her studies. As everyone knows it costs a good deal of money to go to college. Back in those days our fund for helping college students was very meager, and that meant that the students accumulated a pretty sizable debt. Lorena made a record in getting hers cleared up after graduating. She taught school for several years and then came back to Barium in 1940 to take over about the most

DICK PARRISH

Back in 1927 two little red-headed boys entered Barium Springs from Red Springs. The youngest was little Dick Parrish. Not a very strong little boy, he had to be nursed along for several years until he began to live up to the vivid color of his hair. He lived at the Baby Cottage, at Synod's, at Lee's, at Jennie Gilmer, and in the Quads. He took his turn at all the jobs which the boys have to do at Barium, with this invariable result: every matron that had to do with him, every foreman, and every teacher, learned to love the boy for his willingness to do, his eagerness to please, and his all-around unselfishness.

It never seemed to occur to Dick that he was ever called on to do anything hard. He accepted every task and every duty as though he were being done a favor by being allowed to have his share in whatever was being done. He became quite an athlete - the wrestling team and the football team - and somehow the teams that he played on were always good. Dick would be the last to claim that it was his being on the team that made it good, but we who watch these things know that Dick had a lot to do with it. He was Center on our Championship Team of 1941 and made the last touchdown of the season which rounded out a perfect career. He graduated in 1942, entered Davidson that fall and was able to complete one year, and a most satisfactory year, and it was his hope and our hope that when he had served his term in the Armed Services he would come back and complete his college career.

Such, however, was not to be. He was killed on Iwo Jima on the fourth of March, and while we do not have the particulars as yet, we know that Dick was there doing his full duty and maybe a little more, and making the company, the squad, or the battalion which he was in just a little better for his being a member of it.

We here at Barium find it hard to believe that this fine, loyal, eager lad is no more. All of us who knew Dick will be better men and women for having known him.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

"Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together."

A church succeeds in proportion to the loyalty of its members. This being true, one should go to Church, first of all, because the Church needs him! Cooperation brings the same results in a Church as it does in any other organization. Church-going is not Christianity, but it is an essential means of promoting Christianity, and an investigation will reveal that the most consistent Christians are those who attend Church most regularly.

The same thing is true of the best givers, the best prayers, and the best workers. The person who has quit giving, praying, witnessing, and working, is the person whose interest has begun to lag; and lack of interest can almost always be traced to carelessness in Church attendance. Those who are the backbone of the Church, its spiritual strength, its pillars of faithfulness, are, with few exceptions, those who regularly attend its services.

But there is a second reason why one should go to Church, and that is the fact that man needs the Church. In fact, the Church can get along without the individual much better than the individual can get along without the Church.

All great men have recognized this fact. Oliver Wendell Holmes said that there was a little plant in the corner of his soul called reverence that needed watering at least once a week.

St. Augustine said: "Our souls

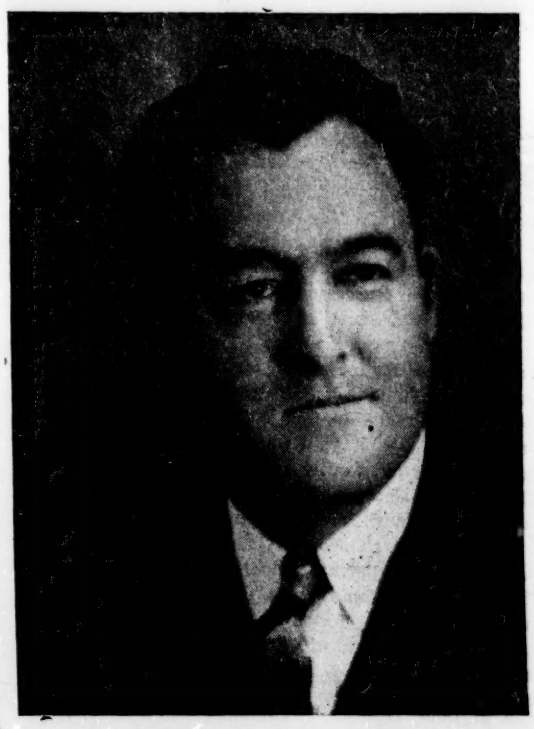
Rev. Thomas C. Cook Accepts Call To the First Presbyterian Church of Laurens, S. C.

Seven years ago, Reverend Tom Cook and family came to Barium. The family then, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Cook, were two little boys. Now they are leaving us to go to Laurens, South Carolina, and the family, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Cook, are one big boy, one middle-sized boy, and one little boy. During the years that this delightful family has been a part of the Barium Springs community we have learned to love not only them, but the members of their families that have for a time sojourned with them. Mr. Cook's father; Mrs. Cook's father and mother; besides younger members of both families. Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Cook's mother, has lived with us so much that if we could we would insist that the Cooks leave her as a peace offering for their leaving.



REV. THOMAS C. COOK

During the years that Mr. Cook has been Pastor of Barium he has lent a helping hand to the neighboring churches many times, and he will be missed in Concord Presbytery as well as at Little Joe's Church.

During the last year Mr. Cook has been Scoutmaster, a most worthy work and one that has meant much to the boys as well as the grown-ups at Barium. He has twice been the official host for Synod, and in all of these things he has performed well.

The community will miss Mr. Cook, not only in his regular duties as Pastor, but in his conduct of the Vespers at our camps, and in many other ways. The good wishes and prayers of the Barium community go with this family to their new home. Mr. Cook will take up his new duties in his new pastorate the first of June.

From the Statesville Daily

Rev. Thomas C. Cook, pastor of Little Joe's Presbyterian church at Barium Springs, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church of Laurens, S. C., and will take up his work there the first of June. Rev. Mr. Cook presented his resignation to the Barium Springs congregation on Sunday, April 8, and at a congregational meeting in connection with the morning service yesterday the congregation voted to concur with him in a request to Concord Presbytery for the dissolution of the pastoral relation, effective June first.

Mr. Cook came to the pastorate of Little Joe's church in 1938 from the Second Presbyterian church of Salisbury, where he had been pastor since 1930 when he was graduated from Union Theological Seminary at Richmond, Va. A na-

CHARLES EDWARD RAYNAL

Charles Edward Raynal was born in Savannah, Georgia, on March 17, 1877, the son of Pierre Napoleon Raynal and Rebecka Ann (Girardeau) Raynal. His father, an architect and designer, was born at Ste Marie aux Mines in the Vosges mountains of Alsace, France, and came with his parents in childhood to America. His mother was a descendant of the French Huguenots who on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes fled from France to South Carolina. When Dr. Raynal was eight years of age his family moved to Thomasville, Georgia. Three years later they moved to Birmingham, Alabama. Here, the young Charles Raynal attended private schools. In 1896, while his family was residing in Bessemer, Alabama, Dr. Raynal entered Southwestern University at Clarksville, Tennessee, from which institution he graduated in 1903. He next attended Princeton University and Princeton Seminary, receiving from these two schools the A. B. and B. D. degrees. He was licenced to preach in 1903 and ordained in 1904 by the Presbytery of Northern Alabama.

Dr. Raynal began his ministerial life as assistant pastor in the 1st Presbyterian Church of Birmingham, Alabama, where he served from 1904 until 1907. His next pastorate was at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Charlotte, N. C., where he served until 1909 when he accepted a call to the 1st Presbyterian Church of Statesville, N. C., which pastorate he held until last October when, due to failing health, he tendered his resignation. Following his resignation, his congregation elected him pastor emeritus. Despite his physical limitations, he continued to serve his people, but finally, realizing that he was growing weaker, he entered Long's hospital. His condition became steadily worse, and on the morning of December 1, 1944, after some two wekes in the hospital, he was called to his eternal reward.

Davidson College in 1941 awarded Dr. Raynal the degree of Doctor of Divinity, an honor well deserved, for Dr. Raynal was first of all a minister of the Gospel, bringing to his preaching, mature scholarship, rare wit and humor, pathos and beauty of expression. He was devoted to his Church and his pastorate in Statesville was marked by the construction of the handsome $200,000 place of worship that was completed in 1934, in every step of the erection of which he took an active interest, making with his own hands much of the woodwork that adorned its walls. A first class botanist, he planned with care the planning of the church grounds, selecting rare and beautiful trees and shrubbery.

Dr. Raynal did not confine his interest to his Church. He made a distinctive contribution to his community. For 35 years he gave unsparingly of his ability and leadership of the civic, educational, cultural and spiritual life of Statesville. He was a trustee of the Statesville Public Library, a trustee of Mitchell College, and a member of the N. C. Interracial committee. He held membership in several scientific societies, and was the author of several pamphlets, contributing from time to time to various magazines, among them, the North Carolina Review.

Dr. Raynal had a number of hobbies that called for skilled hands. His book binding, cabinet making, and wood carving were not to be surpassed. He was an excellent gardener and landscape artist, and he could cast a rod with the best of them.

Dr. Raynal's first marriage was to Miss Mary Graham Morrison, of Charlotte, N. C., who died two years later. In 1914 he married Miss Margaret Mayo Scott, a former member of the faculty of Mitchell College, of which her father was the president. He is survived by his wife, three sons and a daughter: Lt. C. E. Raynal, Jr., chaplain U. S. Navy; Capt John Scott Raynal, U. S. Army, in service overseas; Henry Middleton Raynal, student at Davidson College; and Miss Margaret Isabel Raynal, student at Salem College.

Concord Presbytery will miss Dr. Raynal very sorely. The younger men coming into the Presbytery always found in him an understanding friend. Almost always when a candidate had finished a sermon for licensure, Dr. Raynal was the first to reach him and give words of encouragement.

Dr. Raynal once said: "It is wonderful to be living today and looking ahead to tomorrow. It would take five or six lifetimes to do all I want to do. I will die still interested in this beautiful world."

We who mourn his passing, rejoice that we have known this great soul. We rejoice that he is now a citizen of that world that is more beautiful than anything envisioned here, and in which he will have all eternity to fulfill his desires.

tive of Richmond, he is a graduate of Hampden-Sidney College and a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

During the First World War he served overseas with the 146th field artillery, was in France for six months and in Germany for the same period of time with the army of occupation. He is a member of Hurst Turner Post of the American Legion, this city, and chaplain of the post.

As pastor of the church at Barium, Rev. Mr. Cook was known for his friendly contacts with the Barium Orphanage family, contacts that he has maintained during the war with regular letters to the men in service. He has also been a leader in activities of the Boy Scout organization, and Scoutmaster of the Troop at Barium.

He has a wide circle of friends in the local community who regret his leaving. He had many contacts in Statesville, where he was in touch with civic and church groups and Mitchell College. He was known for his inspiring messages to civic organizations and gifted and versatile, was much sought as an entertainer.

During the interim following the resignation of Dr. Charles E. Raynal as pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Statesville last October, Rev. Mr. Cook served the church as supply, preaching at the evening services and also serving the congregation as pastor, in so far as he could do so in connection with his own work as pastor of the Barium church.

During the seven years of his pastorate at Barium, Mr. Cook has had ten calls to other pastorates. Last summer he rejected a call to the pastorate of the Montreat church. The call to the Laurens church is the first that he had been led to accept.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook and three young sons plan to leave around the first of June for Laurens. Mrs. Cook, who underwent an operation in a Richmond, Va. hospital several weeks ago, is still under treatment there, though improving steadily. The operation has necessitated her remaining in a cast for a number of weeks. Mr. Cook plans to go to Richmond next week to bring her home.

are made for Thee, O God, and are restless until they find themselves in Thee." Holmes and Augustine both recognized that they were sons of God as well as Adam - Deity as well as dust, and that their souls needed nourishment as well as their bodies.

The late John Wanamaker, sensing this same need, traveled nearly 1,000,000 miles during his tenure of office as Postmaster General under the Harrison Administration in order that he might be present each Sunday at his own Church. It is no wonder he was such a great soul and that God so richly blessed him.

The best fathers and mothers, husbands and wives, sons and daughters, teachers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, citizens and neighbors, are those who regularly feed their souls in His Sanctuary.

Why Go To Church? The Church Needs You! You Need The Church!

difficult job that a woman has at Barium - Head Matron. She has had direct charge of all the high school girls, and the immediate supervision of the Lottie Walker Building. She has had the general oversight of all the other girls' departments and cottages, and some supervision of the Boys' Dormitories - quite a job! And Miss Clark, in spite of her youth, has handled it magnificently. She is one person whom we had hoped would not let her light so shine before men that it could be seen of all. We had hoped to keep her as our own little private treasure for years to come, but such was not to be. At least one man saw her good works and has robbed us of our treasure, and by the time you read this Lorena will no longer be Miss Clark - she will be Mrs Piner.

We know that wherever she goes there will be people who will love her, that she will make other people happy, and that the home in which she presides will be truly a Christian home. All who know her, and that means a pretty large section of the Barium family both here and of our graduates, will wish her well and will be proud for having served with her at Barium Springs.

gain he read this enigma which his father had left him. In his letter he had said he left him nothing unless it was a clue that he would find in a further paper. A clue to what? And was this insignificant looking piece of paper the clue he spoke of? Evidently so. It was the only scratch he found in the envelope.

Sam sat on the rock, studying the slip word by word. "If doubtful but daring"—apparently there was to be adventure, everything was not to come too easy. "Get your inspiration where the creek does the toe dance and the water runs uphill." So his father recognized the fact that it would take an inspiration to make him wake up. But where was he to ever get an inspiration? "Where the creek does a toe dance and the water runs uphill!"—wasn't that a definite and sensible answer? "Toe dance", "uphill." Maybe his father's worries had been too much for him. But no, he couldn't think of that. Evidently he was not getting an inspiration here. He must seek it elsewhere. He would go back and sleep over it.

That night Sam sought a theater to help pass the time away. He couldn't get his mind started to work in any systematic way, not even to concentrate on his puzzle. So as means of relaxation, he found what he thought would be a good picture. He went in and tried to enjoy it but his mind would turn to the slip of paper again and again. Nevertheless he managed to stay through the picture, thinking that after a rest, he would be able to go to sleep and then wake up and solve that mystery that had caused him so much unrest.

He returned to his room and made hasty preparations for bed and rolled in. After tossing and tumbling for an hour he finally began to drift off into a very light sleep. He seemed to be on a train, coming up the mountains with his father, the first time he and his father had made the trip together when he was a boy. His father seemed to be pointing out different things to him and about each one he had something interesting to tell, just as if he knew every crook and turn on the road and seemed to impress Sam now in his dreams was the way in which his father talked. His eyes seemed to sparkle and gleam as he spoke of a certain mountain in the distance.

At length they reached Andrews Geyser and then his father's whole face seemed to glow. But now in reality it was Sam's turn to glow! Didn't he hear his father saying something about dancing? In an instant Sam was wide awake. What was it his father was talking about when he heard him say "dancing?" All else seemed to have escaped him but the word "dancing." Then he remembered that it was in connection with Andrews' Geyser. To be sure! What is it that Andrews' Geyser does if not a toe-dance. What is it that Andrews' Geyser does if it does not do more than run up hill? It shoots straight up! At last he now had a clue. It was to Andrews' Geyser he must go to get his inspiration. So far so good! But this was only a beginning. He must find where the hills juggle the juggernaut and the eighteenth hole and last of all the mate to this little slip of paper. This last must be the most important.

Sitting on the edge of the bed, picturing in his mind the dancing water of Andrews' Geyser, Sam realized there was no more sleep for him. What could he do? He couldn't be still nor could he pace the floor all night. It would never do to go pacing the streets at 12:30 at night. As he, thinking, it occurred to him that now was the time to get that inspiration.

Sam jumped at the thought and he got ready to start on his uncertain expedition about as hastily as he had gotten ready for bed. Thinking it most suitable for such an escapade he adorned himself in his golf suit, plus a light weight overcoat. In his pockets were his few dollars, a few cigarettes and a match box.

He rushed down to the station only to find that the next train was a through one carrying only pullmans and it was not due for several hours. What should a man with only a few dollars do? Just at that moment he noticed a long freight train slowly moving in the direction he wished to go. With a sudden impulse, he swung on to a car whose door was open as it slowly passed. Crawling inside, he sat down and leaned up against the side of the car, just beside the door. As he sat there thinking of the unusualness of his situation, he gradually became conscious of a tiny glow in one end of the car. He focused his attention on the small light for some time and with the aid of his imagination it was first one thing. and then another. Looking at one time, it seemed to be one single glowing eye glaring at him, while looking at it again it seemed to be only a spark of fire. At length he got a faint whiff of cigarette smoke and decided that it was a cigarette. But this was more alarming than ever, because a burning cigarette was usually held by somebody. Peculiar sensations raced up and down his spine, at this conclusion. He had been riding a good while already and surely it wouldn't be very long untill he would be in the vicinity of his destination. If only this stranger for surely that must be what it was, would keep still untill then, all would be well. But if----?

The dim glow gradually grew fainter and fainter and then went completly out. Sam sat still listening to the rumbling of the freight cars and straining at every suspicious sound. The suspense, the wondering about the light was getting the best of Sam when quite suddenly out of the pitchy darkness flashed a light into his face, so bright that it completely blinded him. Almost simultaneous to the flash of a light he felt a sharp crack on his cranium and so far as Sam was concerned, this business of living seemed about over with, for he crumpled up into a heap at the side of the door.

What this unknown passenger saw when he flashed the light on Sam was a very nice looking young man, well dressed and the kind of fellow that usually carries something more than matches in his pockets. Being prepared for what ever he might see, this tramp had been favorably impressed with his victim. Hurriedly he had searched Sam's pockets only to find those few dollar bills that remained.

What could be more disgusting? After going to the trouble of breaka man's head it was more than disgusting not to find anything but a few dollar bills.

But now that this bird of evil had ended Sam's miseries for the time being, what was to be done with him? If he could be left there, he would come to in a short while so he must act at once, and he did.

At this point Sam stirred just a little and in a flash of the eye he felt himself rolled over and then another jolt which seemed not only to jolt his brain but to jolt his whole frame because this time it was several hours before he stirred again. He had been rolled out of the car.

However, after a long time, Sam slowly raised himself to a sitting position. He blinked his eyes several times but all for naught, for it was inky black. He remembered that bright flash of light and then darkness and it was still dark. Where could he be? He felt that he was surrounded by something, but what? He then began to feel around him and found on one side the railroad track, while on the other was what seemed a huge rock wall. He sat back down. This had been an unusually long night because it was still dark.

Then unconsciously he put his hand in his pocket and drew out a cigarette. That made him remember that he had had more than a few cigarettes there but all else was gone. He also remembered of having put his little jagged slip of paper carefully in his shirt pocket. With much difficulty he found it still there. After searching his pockets he found one match. He lighted his cigarette with his one match and as he threw it aside he glimpsed out of the corner of his eye, by the faint light of the match, a tiny jagged slip if paper, just like the one in his pocket. His heart jumped but all was dark again and that was his last match.
